4. Can we make difference in the modern world?

There is and always will be a lot of speculations about ~~whether~~ ^{whether} or not people still can make a difference in the world. It seems to be unlikely to many of us. What else can be done?

In my opinion, humanity can still achieve a lot of things and make improvements in our world. First of all, I think that we can improve living conditions, ~~in our world~~. Lots of people each day suffer from poverty, unemployment, bad education and lack of living space. They are facing an enormous amount of problems. And not only do they exist in developing countries but all around the globe.

What is more, even though many men think ~~it~~ that the problem of inequality concerning women and men's rights is solved, there ~~are still~~ is still space for improvement. Many women ~~are paid~~ earn less ~~that~~ compared to the average wage of men. Women have to pay more for simple things that men usually buy for lower prices.

These are just two examples of problems that we have in our lives. I personally think that humanity can solve them. Each day many people bring world's attention to global problems as a result we start establishing charities, forming organisations, writing petitions. Because of them people start realising that we can live in a better world so they start taking action. The world is changing each day and I truly think that we can make a difference.
