① Ah, pets such delightful creatures. They are often associated with lots of health benefits. Riding a horse, spending time chasing your cat or taking the dog for long walks through the woods or in parks can be great forms of exercising. Pets have been recognized as best stress busters. Simply watching the aquarium with colorful fish floating can help people beat their stress levels. But there are many other benefits of owning pets.

Pets, whether dogs, cats or farm animals, make great friends because they are a great source of love and friendship. They are playful beings in the house as they keep everyone, young and old, happy in the house. Dog owners frequently stop over to talk to each other on the streets or in the parks.

I know about dogs-heroes that make a difference in people's lives every single day. Guide dogs are dedicated to their work, and without them, many could not do simple daily activities that most take for granted. Their work has saved countless lives.

Our pets deserve unconditional love and attention.
