4. Nowadays, it isn't rare for someone to have a pet. Humanity made animals their allies a long time ago, but back then pets were just tools to work efficiently. So why do people have pets in our days?

The very first thought that crossed my mind was that pets are cute. People can have pets because they like how it affss looks, and so on.

Other can have pets because they help people out. Those pets tend to love their owners, they protect him and help him in his daily routine. (For example, dogs can help blind owners cross the road)

Some people have pets because they feel lonely. They feel as if a pet will make them a company, and most of the times, they're right. Pets concure depression, which is incredible.

Pets are called „man's best friend" for a reason. Pets became our close friendss, not tools they once were. Pets became one of the most important things in our life.
