The theme of my text is "Why do people have pets?"

I have so many answers of this question. But I will give examples.

And, the first example is me. I don't have many pets, or don't have big pets. I have fishes.

They are quite and small, and I look at them when I want to think.

The second example: my friends. I have not many friends but they have a lot of pets! Oh, rhyme!

They have pets, because they want to understand what is real friendship. Also they have fun with their little devoted friends.

Just imagine:

You're tired because you had classes at school. You open the door and... A dog or a cat or any another pet runs to you with friendly shouts! It is licking you. It's fantastic to feel and understand that!

That is why people have and love pets.
